

The Afghanistan War: Who's Responsible?

https://media.blubrry.com/jbs_activate_america/jbs.org/assets/podcast/aa/activate-america-210824-The-Afghanistan-War-Whos-Responsible.mp3

Podcast: Play in new window | Download

There's more than meets the eye when it comes to the recent withdrawal of American troops from Afghanistan. For example, did you know that the Afghan War was led by Council on Foreign Relations members, including Gen Patraeus?

For those unaware, he was the head of the CIA and was forced to resign after being caught in a sex scandal. He went from there to heading up the plan of the CFR for uniting North America, the United States, Canada, and Mexico, into a single country which would abrogate the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution with its Bill of Rights.

Now we have witnessed the fall of the Afghan government and the rapid sweeping advancement of the Taliban across all of Afghanistan. In addition, we have left behind millions and millions of dollars of military equipment now in the hands of the Taliban, including some of the latest technology in military equipment. Much of this is already on its way to Pakistan and then the China according to interviews on FOX television of Afghani experts.

The people in charge of the current Afghan situation are members of the CFR. Let us remind you that the CFR's mission is a one-world government, not an independent United States.

Action Items:

- 1.) Learn more about how the Council on Foreign Relations pulls government strings in Art's book, Shadows of the Deep State.
- 2) Get involved & help stop a North American Union by using our action page.